According to the constitution the electors elected on the 4th of last month meet in their respective state capitals to vote for the man that shall be president of the United States for the next four years dating from March 3, 1917. Of course they have a right to vote for whom they think would make the best president, but from recent events that have transpired The Astorian feels warranted in indicating in a little prophetic and stating in advance that of the 40 electors votes cast in the thirty-eight state capitals, 219 of them will be for a man named Cleveland, now a resident of New York state, and 197 will be for a party named Buine, living in Arizona, Mr.

The case of the British Columbia Packing Company vs. W. T. Coleman came up in the U. S. circuit court yesterday, having been transferred from the circuit court of Clatsop county. The hearing of a demurrer to the complaint was set for Friday next. Plaintiff alleges that they entered into a contract with the defendant to sell their salmon for a commission of five per cent; that in 1912 they packed 22,240 cases, and in 1913 they packed 5,640 cases, which were delivered to the defendant and were of the value of $137,000. For this amount the defendant has failed and refused to account, and plaintiff pays for judgment therefor.—Oregonian 2.

AS INCH OF RAIN.

ED. ASTORIAN:
In this morning's issue of your paper you say that the rainfall here for November was 2.63 inches. What is an inch of rain? How do you measure it?

L.

Astoria, December 2, 1913.
The U. S. government stations observers at different points whose business it is to report the weather, rainfall, direction of winds, etc. There is one at Astoria. If you look in the afternoon about 8 o'clock, you will see him on the top of Capt. Flavel's warehouse, where he has an apparatus supplied by the government to measure the rainfall. The expression "an inch of rain" is arbitrary. It would be just as easy to talk of a meter of rain or a foot of rain, but the weather department has taken the inch for a standard. If 101 tons of water fell upon an acre of ground, about a gallon of that water distributed over a surface of two square feet would cover that surface to the depth of an inch. So that if 2.63 inches of rain fell in Astoria in November, every acre of the city's surface received 263 tons of water during that time.

Mrs. Bryce would respectfully announce to the ladies of Astoria that she is prepared to do dressmaking in all its branches at her room on Cass St., opposite Odd Fellows building.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.
A Summary of the Document.

A Plain Exposition of the State of the Country, With Suggestions Relative Thereto.

Following is a summary of the message from President Arthur to the congress of the United States on the occasion of its meeting on the 1st inst. After referring to the quiet result of the election the president calls the attention of congress to the necessity of providing better regulations for counting the electoral vote. He then enters upon our foreign relations, all of which he states continue amicable. A treaty has been concluded with Belgium securing equal rights to the citizens of both countries, including the trade-mark clause.

A convention will soon be negotiated for the arbitration of the claims of American citizens who have suffered through acts of the Chilean authorities during the late war between Peru and Chile.

The president says the hostilities between France and China embarrass our eastern relations. The Chinese government has adjusted and paid claims of Americans for loss of property suffered during the recent riots at Canton. He recommends that the Canton fund be returned to China. The question whether the anti-Chinese immigration statute passed at the last session does not violate the treaty rights of Chinese who hold return certificates, valid under the old law but not by the new, suggests that vessels not properly by American citizens for foreign traffic should be registered and documented at uniform rate, to guard bona fide property rights.

This government has recognized the International Association of Congo, and appointed a commercial agent thereto, and sent delegates to the Berlin conference for the consideration of the question; and the president recommends the purchase of legation premises in Congo, Japan, China and Persia, and advises the restoration of the agency and consulate-general at Cairo on its former basis, the want of diplomatic representations there having embarrassed our relations with Egypt.

The president suggests congressional aid for the completion of the pedestal for the Bartholdi statue.

He recommends an extradition treaty with the German empire, as existing treaties with the individual states thereof do not properly secure the extradition of fugitives from justice. He favors the removal of the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty.

THE CITY OF FESTIVAL.
The Present Effect of the World's Exposition.

(Special Correspondence.)
NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 22, 1884.

Foreigners, in bright costumes, filling up the streets; oranges turning from green to gold in the multitudinous gardens; new theaters, museums and concert halls opening up; superlative sense of motion and gaiety in this fair city, so famous for its royal revelry; everything, in fact, tending to demonstrate that we are nearing the delightful month of December and the opening of our world's exposition. In less than four weeks it will be upon us and we shall hear the genial accents of President Arthur, propelled by the vast sounding board of the Music hall in our main building, proclaim a welcome to the world—the whole world—which will be well miniaturized and kaleidoscoped in a building that contains thirty-three acres of space. The acoustic properties of this Music hall, which has chairs for 10,000 people, are simple admirable, and the same may be said for the entire building, which attracts daily crowds, and on Sundays would cause a casual observer to imagine that the exposition had already opened. Around the exposition grounds a great deal of private enterprise is being displayed in the shape of new hotels, new cottages and new pleasure houses for the entertainment and accommodation of visitors. The same spirit manifests itself in the rehabilitation of old houses and furnishing up of the shop fronts and the stalls in the business portion of the city. Last Sunday steamers began running from the foot of Canal street to the exposition grounds, and the doubling of the car tracks on some of the streets, gives evidence of the business portion of the city. Last Sunday steamers began running from the foot of Canal street to the exposition grounds, and the doubling of the car tracks on some of the streets, gives evidence of the business portion of the city.

With a market which, in the matter of fish, game, fruit and vegetables surpasses any in the world, and with coals which may rightly be deemed capital from the fact that they have served their apprenticeship in all the capitals of Europe, New Orleans offers to the visitor of the north and west most excellent physical foundations for the substantial intellectual enjoyment, which her world's exposition promises.

Almost every newspaper reader knows that we have here the most massive exhibitional structures ever erected; a main building of thirty-three acres with no partitions, but delicate pillars and a maze of glimmering aisles; a Mexican building of oriental richness in design and coloring, where gold and green, maroon and sunset red, conspire with carvings to enchant the eye; a horticultural hall, the largest ever made, and many others that must be seen to be believed? But at thought of all the wonders these wonders will contain, like a succession of Chinese boxes, the pen halts, for to enumerate all the special features of attraction which this "World's Exposition" offers would be like counting the leaves of a banyan tree, and we leave it to the future historian of the finished event. The animating and directing minds at the head of this enterprise seem to have forgotten nothing. The immensity of the live stock interest, the advance of electrical invention, the education of the Indian by government schools, the progress of woman's work and the elevation of the colored race—all these have received equal and just attention from the management. The last point, interpenetrating as it does the material progress and development of the south, has gained especial head. The management deeming that the identification of the colored race with the material prosperity of the south rendered a demonstration of their educational advance since emancipation eminently fit and instructive, decided to give every possible stimulus to such an exhibition, and voted an ample appropriation to aid those engaged in this branch. To their credit be it said, the colored people have entered into this work with an enthusiasm that promises most interesting results. From outside the exposition proper many attractions naturally gravitate to such a center.

An international drill will be held, in which, besides volunteer soldiers, companies of the regular army, Mexican regiments and Spanish battalions from Cuba propose to participate. A United States fleet, promised by the secretary of the navy, will lie along the river, and a sham naval and land battle is contemplated. Many organizations of national reputation and extent will hold their annual convocation at New Orleans during this period. The carnival pageants, occurring in the latter part of the winter (which generally serves a very summary purpose on New Orleans, with an average temperature of 65 degrees Fahrenheit) will be this season of unparalleled gorgeousness and magnify the fascination of this already world-famous festival. Grand concerts, given regularly in Music hall, with the largest organ ever built for an exposition, and the fine French and Italian grand opera houses of the city itself should hold out to lovers of music an irresistible invitation. Besides the regular exhibitions of national water, fresh and salt in every direction are unequalled. Up the Father of Waters and along the richly verdured bayous, or into the Gulf to the Florida Keys and coast places of Texas, Mexico, Central America, Caribbean and West Indian palace steamers, at enormously low rates, every few days will take parties of pleasure. The rates of transportation, too, by land and less than ever granted before by railroad companies. In short, nothing is lacking to make the world's exposition the crowning event of this great and splendid century.
